

ProMark – a future-proof Workforce Management platform

In this age of disruption, software solution providers struggle to keep up with the pace of emerging IT trends. Some legacy solution providers can modernise their solution – many more will go into sunset mode.

Maintaining a leadership position in the market requires a clear strategy and ambitious investments in development. We continuously invest in the modernisation of ProMark with focus on three strategic areas:

1. Modern user experiences
2. Value-driven functionality
3. Fit the IT landscape

We are at the forefront of meeting Workforce Management requirements – now and in the future. This enables our customers to evolve their Workforce Management capabilities as a natural part of their winning digitalisation strategies.

Mark Information is recognized as Microsoft Silver Partner

The certification differentiates us from our competitors and makes ProMark a future-proof solution for customers who have chosen to pursue a Microsoft strategy.

"As the entire IT market is shifting towards Software as a Service business models, ProMark must transition to a native cloud application to fit into the IT landscape and meet the demands of both existing and future customers", says Morten Janum, CIO, Mark Information.

Thus, as part of our cloud strategy ProMark is now also offered as a public cloud running on the MS Azure platform.

New EU judgment on registration of working hours

A new EU judgment imposes all employers an obligation to ensure that the duration of time worked each day by each worker is reported. Therefore, the obligation not only applies to hourly employees, but also to salaried employees and other types of employees.

It is now up to the individual EU member states to decide how it is implemented in national legislation. As the decision can have a major impact on our customers, we will follow the development very closely.
